Found in the early 1980's, this adze is the finest hard stone artifact in my collection. It was found in a corn field in southern Jackson County, Ohio in the Black Fork watershed. Made of tan granite it is 6 1/4 inches long and 3 1/8 inches wide at its widest part. As shown in the photographs the adze has some plow damage. The poll end shows some use, however, the bit shows little use.
